TECHTIPS

Private Branch Exchange

A Private Branch Exchange (PBX) phone system is a private telephone network used within a company or organization. Users of a PBX phone system can communicate with people inside and outside the organization using different communication channels, like Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP).

A PBX allows you to have more phones than you have physical phone lines and allows free calls between users. Additionally, it provides features like call transfers, voicemail, call recording, interactive voice menus and call queues.

A hosted phone system provides the same services and features as an on-premise PBX but it is installed a little differently. Your provider or 'host' maintains the technology for you completely off-site, while still supplying you with a great connection and other benefits.

One of the main reasons businesses use hosted PBX is that it cancels out a lot of the costs that come with an on-premise system. Letting LightTube take care of your PBX in the cloud eliminates installation, hardware and maintenance costs. It also cuts down on personnel costs, because you won't need an IT staff that is dedicated to solving problems with the PBX. For a monthly fee, maintenance and software updates are all managed by LightTube, leaving you to focus on your business.
